Excerpt: . . . very self can be drawn. 1818--19. My Dear Brother And Sister, You will have been prepared, before this reaches you, for the worst news you could have, nay, if Haslams letter arrived in proper time, I have a consolation in thinking the first shock will be passed before you receive this. The last days of poor Tom were of the most distressing nature; but his last moments were not so painful, and his very last was without a pang. I will not enter into any parsonic comments on death. Yet the commonest observations of the commonest people on death are true as their proverbs. I have a firm belief in immortality, and so had Tom. During poor Toms illness I was not able to write, and since his death the task of beginning has been a hinderance to me. Within this last week I have been every where, and I will tell you, as nearly as possible, how I go on. I am going to domesticate with Brown, that is, we shall keep house together. I shall have the front-parlor, and he the back one, by which I shall avoid the noise of Bentleys children, and be able to go on with my studies, which have been greatly interrupted lately, so that I have not the shadow of an idea of a book in my head, and my pen seems to have grown gouty for verse. How are you going on now The...
