Then add the vertical axis  $TT$  so that a stated condition of valve setting is satisfied, as for instance, that the leads shall be equal in full forward gear. Fig. 92. Link Motion, Illustrated In Fig. 76. Twelve Link Positions And The Valve Displacement Curve For Mid-gear. The eccentric circle is divided into 24 parts, starting first from the end of the forward eccentric, and then from the end of the backward eccentric, so that the points of the two series of divisions do not necessarily coincide as they appear to do in the figure. The points 1 and 8, for instance, are not coincident, but are very nearly so in the case taken. 92. The suppression of the eccentric rods. The valve displacement is small compared with the size of the parts forming the gear. If the gear is set out to scale, therefore, the displacement to be measured off becomes too small to obtain a valve diagram from which the distribution can be inferred with much accuracy. Consequently, it may be taken as a cardinal rule that the gear should be set out full size so that the valve displacement curves may be obtained full size. The setting out of a link motion, full size, in 24 positions for each value of  $u$  taken, is tedious and troublesome. The labour may be considerably lightened by using a template...
